OTTAWA - Queen Elizabeth toured the Arctic with her family despite the cold and black flies for a variety of reasons. But possibly the most important was the federal government's determination to make the sovereign presence of the Crown felt "north of 60," as the officials here describe their domain.

That demonstration was aimed not only at foreigners, but also at ambitious provincial premiers trying to annex federal land as well as territorial politi-cians who want to take it over from Ottawa as new

"territorial government" has only taken the edge off the bitterness for a time. He has indicated that as the territories grow and develop, they will get more say in their own

Chretien has studiously avoided even the hint of a promise that some day the two territorial councils would not dominated by Ottawa appointees but even if the territories are given provincial status, that won't be enough to satisfy the northerners.

Great Oil Boom Started in Leduc

It was not long after that the great oil boom started in Leduc. A lip-biting Ottawa saw $2.9 billion in royalties and fees pour into provincial treasuries from the western sedimentary basin in the two decades that followed the 1947 discovery strike and by this year that total will have soared beyond $4 billion,

Add to that an estimated $140 million paid in property taxes by the western oil industry during the period and the unknown but undoubtedly significant income taxes from the oil companies and their workers over the years which have gone to provincial treasuries under the taxrental agreements.

It all adds up to a lost to be mourned even by a national government.

Protected Textile Industry

THE GOVERNMENT'S NEW textile protectionist policy, generally supported by all parties in the House, will have the effect of reducing consumer choice and increasing prices. Besides the announced surtax on imported shirts, there will be a textile review board, more financial assistance for the industry, a fashion design assistance program, a closer watch on imports and development and productivity centres for clothing industries established by the government. All this for an industry which last year claimed 57 per cent of the domestic textile market.

Voluntary quotas on imported textiles in the past put the Canadian industry in an enviable position. Domestic production has climbed from 251 million pounds to 456 million pounds in recent years. But - and here is the crunch - imports have increased from 112 million pounds to 318 million pounds. The textile industry, with its strong Ottawa lobby, apparently feels hard done by. Minister of Industry Jean-Luc Pepin says the government will be prepared to accord the industry special protection "in order to facilitate adjustment to or strengthening of the more viable lines of production.'

The key phrase here is "viable lines of production." Government has promised a rationalization of textile tariffs: that is high tariffs will be maintained or increased on foreign textile lines in which Canadian manufacturers are competitive. This is sensible in that nearly 60,000 jobs are at stake. But Canadian manufacturers should be encouraged concentrate production in specialized areas where they excel, leaving non-competitive areas to foreign manufacturers.

Restrictive textile import quotas will hit Asian countries such as Japan and Hong Kong the hardest - the same countries with which Canada is trying to expand trade. Restricting a stable Asian export. to this country is likely to result in economic retaliation. In the House on June 2. Liberal MP David Anderson asked the Prime Minister if he had discussed the restrictive Canadian measures with Asian heads of state. Mr. Trudeau replied in the affirmative but added that he did not expect retaliatory measures although the Asians "did not know when exactly in what way our measures would affect them." When the various Asian countries do know. Canadian export trade could suffer

ON THE FACE OF IT, THE REport of last year's 17 per cent increase in the value of surveyed land in British Columbia reflects a substantial gain for property

The figures, it has been explained, can be applied only roughly to the real estate market. Hence an increase in land value of 70 per cent in the last six years is not necessarily an uncontrovertible yardstick for each lot in any given area.

But even in rough form, the report indicates one of the problems of recent years for the home-owner. His holdings obviously have increased in dollar value. If he wants to sell, he stands to make a handsome profit on the basis of that increase. If, on the other hand, he wishes to retain his property, which is probably his home, the rising values automatically increase his assessment. Since taxes have not in recent times shown any inclination to fall, the paper value of his real estate increases his own costs. He has to pay more to hold on to his

For those on fixed income, the difficulty is obvious. Modest as his original investment may have been in a place in which to set down roots, circumstances have changed the basis of his planning.

The immediate crisis having passed, it is easy to apportion the compliments. But as Labor Minister Peterson indicated, without the compulsory features of the British. Columbia Mediation Act, a return to work might still be a fond hope. Therefore it is mystifying to hear the B.C. Federation of Labor claiming that the Mediation Act is finished. In the interest of tolerance,

A further when all else fails in settling labormanagement disputes. The current walk-out of pulp and paper workers at seven British Columbia plants is a case in point.

The B.C. Mediation Act has few defenders. Not only is it authoritarian in some clauses, it is also unwieldy, costing taxpayers about half-a-million dollars each year for a facility that has yet to be used. The provincial government has indicated there will be some changes made in the act at the next Legislative session. But considering the past week's events, it is clear that some compulsory method of ending labor-management deadlocks is needed in the public interest.

Take It from the Experts

FROM RACING DRIVERS, SOME His record reveals his competency of the best in the business, comes a protest against speed that might well be applied to motorists on the highway.

At speeds required to qualify for some of the major auto races on this continent, says Wally Dallenbach, "we are more or less aiming the cars down the straights like you would a gun and hoping for the best."

Too frequently hope is not enough. Crashes occur with serious, often fatal, results.

The speeds on the track, of course, are vastly higher than those on the highway, and so is the ability of race drivers to handle their machines.

No one discounts the risks taken in conventional big-time racing. But when speed draws complaint from its practitioners in the professional track ranks, its hazards on the road cannot be downgraded, despite the frequently expressed opinion of a highways minister who seems content to shrug off that element in public slaughter.

By HAROLD GREER

FROM TORONTO

Law by Numbers, Not by Wisdom

 \mathbf{I}^{T} IS unfortunate that the opinions of the Supreme Court of Canada in the breathalizer reference have not been textually reported in the daily press. Most people would agree on reading them, I think, that the five judges who upheld the government's proclamation of this law were wrong, and that the four who dissented were right. Much more than validity of the breathalizer law was involved in this issue. The court had the duty of defining a most important aspect of the relationship between the legislative and executive branches of government in the it also had the opportunity of carving out for itself a new interpretative role in that system. It discharged its duty by applying the dead hand of legalism and it blew its opportunity.

Justice Minister Turner and the federal government may take such solace as they please from the court's vindication of their position. The hard fact is that a five-to-four decision in an important case is law by numbers, not right, reason or wisdom. The result. as in painting, is always trite and unsatisfactory.

The issue in this case is complicated and easy to over-simplify, but essentially it comes down to this, that legislation passed by parliaments does not automatically and necessarily become just because parliament has passed it. It becomes law when the government decides to accept it-either (in the absence of contrary provisions) when it receives "royal assent" after third reading, or subsequently when it is "proclaimed" by the government.

Necessary Arrangement

This is a necessary arrangement since many laws cannot be implemented as soon as parliament has approved them; regulations have to be drafted and bureaucracies set up to administer them. By and large the great majority of legislated bills are put into effect when practical and the "will of parliament" is carried out. But also involved is a grey area of executive discretion wherein the government, quite arbitrarily as a matter of policy, may decide not to implement all or parts of a bill.

In the congressional system, this is handled openly and formally through the executive veto and pocket veto, so that everyone knows where matters stand. But in Canada, no doubt because of its rarity (after all, most legislation gets implemented because the government introduced it in the first place), it tends to be under-cover, unstructured and even unadmitted: no government will confess to flouting the "will of Parliament."

Yet the possibilities of abuse are manifest. Governments have brought in legislation for political reasons which they have never implemented. They have added sections to bills as a result of public or parliamentary pressure which never see the light of day. They have put in safeguards which have disappeared on proclamation. They have timed the implementation of legislation to help some people and hurt others. All this has happened before and will, unhappily, happen again if the Supreme Court's judgment in the breathalizer reference is accepted as the last work on the question.

DENNIS THE MENACE

JUST MY EARS! NOT MY BRAINS!"

In the breathalizer case, Parliament nacted a new offence-section 224 of the Criminal Code-of driving while having a blood-alcohol content of over .08 cent, and made it mandatory that a suspected motorist submit to a breathalizer test. It then said, in section 224A, that the result of such test, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, is proof of the blood-alcohol content providing (amongst other things) that the accused was offered a specimen of his breath in "an approved container" for his own use.

Without Safeguard

On November 19 of last year, howthe government proclaimed the new law without the safeguards set out in section 224A, justifying the omission the ground that an "approved conhad not been developed and tainer" did not appear imminent. Subsequently Mr. Justice Munroe of the British Columbia Supreme Court held the law had not been validly proclaimed and the government referred it to the federal court for a ruling.

The government relied on section 120 of the legislation, namely that "this act or any of the provisions of this act shall come into force on a day or days to be fixed by proclamation." This, it contended, gave it the widest discretion to proclaim as it pleased; Parliament had given it the power and the wisdom of such a policy was for Parliament and not the courts to decide.

Five of the Supreme Court judges agreed with this view, albeit Justices Hall and Laskin somewhat reluctantly There was much hassling over the meaning of the word "provision," but the given the government a free hand by enacting section 120 and if it did not like the result, it had the power to remedy. "If there has been a failure to live up to Parliament's expectations on the manner in which the proclamation power should be exercised," Mr. Justice Laskin wrote, "the remedy does not lie with the judges."

This of course is mere dissembling and rests upon the legal and academic myth that it is Parliament which controls the government rather than the other way around. The fact is that the safeguard of giving an accused person a sample of his breath, obviously to enable him to rebut police evidence in court,

Looking Back

From the Times of July 27, 1910

Some men at work clearing on Vancouver's Nanaimo Street were startled the other afternoon by the sudden apparition of a man running towards them as fast as his legs would carry him. Between his breathless gasps he explained that he had seen a bear standing fully seven feet high. In a few moments there was a loud crackling among the undergrowth and the bear emerged at his best pace. The men gave bruin his quietus with their rifles.

the government's majority - to intend something while legislating and quite another thing to expect it to condemn and reverse the government for failing to do what was intended. Especially when the government has made an ass of itself by acting stimidly and then claiming it has done nothing wrong. Where Is Remedy? If the remedy for this sort of thing does not lie in the courts, it lies nowhere, That it is open to judicial review and correction was amply demonstrated in the minority opinion of Mr. Justice Ronald Martland, who simply carried the government's argument to its logical and absurd - conclusion. If the government was right in its interpretation of the law, Mr. Justice Martland observed, that it could on proclamation break up the legislation in any way it pleased, then it could do the same with the section on abortion and truncate it by proclaiming one part and not another.

But the section on abortion is written as two subsections, the first providing that it is an offence to abort a foetus and the second providing that it is not an offence if it is considered necessary to preserve the life of the mother. Thus to proclaim the first part and not the second would be to bring into force something for which Parliament never provided. Therefore, Mr. Justice Martland concluded in a masterpiece of understatement, the government's interpretation of its power cannot be sustained; the breathalizer offence could not be proclaimed without the safeguard because that clearly was not the intention of Parliament, on the face of the legislation

Unfortunately, however, only three other judges agreed with him and we now have a situation where persons are being convicted of offences without the protection of a defence provided by Parliament, and from which others will escape when an "approved container available in six months or a year's time. This is sometime justice and the produce of autocratic government; it is to be expected, perhaps, from pressured politicians but it is disheartening to find five judges of the Supreme Court going along

Contesting An Ocean

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

IKE AN INCIPIENT tropical storm whose force and direction are not yet predictable, a contest is brewing between NATO and the Soviet Union for naval supremacy in the Indian Ocean. Whether the West can, at reasonable successfully contest Soviet incursions into the Indian Ocean, is by no means clear. Whether, if it does not, the Indian Ocean will become another Mediterranean is the cominous question Thus far, the Suez Canal being closed, the Soviet presence in the Indian Ocean is relatively modest. It consists, according to best information, of four groups of surface vessels, two of them apparently involved in missile tracking, and an undetermined number of nuclear submarines. Two of the latter have been spotted.

Diplomatically, Moscow has proposed "collective security" treaties with littoral states, notably India, but has made little progress.

Washington Interest

Washington's principal interest in the ocean is in tracking the movements of Soviet subs. The previous Labor government of Britain gave it low priority, scheduling (against American advice) total pull-out from east of Suez. Harold Wilson saw little or no meaningful threat to what Tory Prime Minister Edward Heath now calls "5,000 miles of vulnerable sea passage."

the Indian Ocean is to be contested_and Heath seems deeply persuaded of its importance—the politicall cost of doing it in co-operation with South Africa will quickly become visible. Indeed, the cost has already been surfacing in explosions of wnath at Britain in Africa, Asia, the British Commonwealth and the UN.

Non-whites throughout the world are quickly aroused by any step which eases international pressure on South Africa's widely criticized policy of apartheld (extreme white supremacy). Selling arms to Pretoria, even if theoretically for "external defence," would have that

And arms can rarely be classified as to their potential use. The Nimrod plane which Pretoria is reported to be seeking is not merely an electronic reconnaissance aircraft capable of detecting and tracing submarines but also a thoroughly serviceable operations centre for coordinating counter-insurgency actions similar to the ones South Africa has recently undertaken in Rhodesia.

The Leander class frigate, also said to be on Pretoria's shopping list, is not only a submarine killer but an effective means of patrolling a coastline against guerrilla landings.

Coastal Control

In the atmosphere of racial antagonism which apartheid has produced, this could easily become necessary. Defendants in a recent South African court proceeding were accused by the government of seeking out forested landing sites for personnel-carrying submarines.

Is South African help in tracking and itesting the Soviet presence in the Indian Ocean worth the price of intensifying racial antagonisms, disrupting the Commonwealth, driving independent African countries further toward Soviet camp, and risking new escalation in the weaponry with which race war in southern Africa may be fought? This is the kind of question which plagues policy planners.

The core of the problem is the cruelty apartheid. South Africa could be a valuable western ally if she had not morally disqualified herself in such dramatic and visible fashion as to render any close association with her a political handicap of serious proportions.

Letters to the Editor

Congratulations on your excellent editorial of the 23rd calling for more camping facilities. These must indeed be provided-we are inviting visitors to a feast where many will not find a chair.

We could not retreat even if we wished because the people will come anyway. There is plenty of room for thousands more sites without encroaching on the real outdoors. Let there be no doubt of that. But from here on in tenters will be a dwindling tribe so new concepts must be explored to accommodate the hordes of trailers and camper trucks now taking to the road.

Tourism may soon surpass mining to become our second industry. But this will be no blessing if planning fails to keep ahead of the flood. Not only the visitors will suffer-we also will be overwhelmed and prevented from making decent use of our own outdoors. -Eiton A. Anderson, vice-president, Federation of B.C. Naturalists.

Intelligence Tests

Apropos of two recent articles on intelligence tests, which appeared recently in the Times: The I.Q. like all other things is due to both heredity and environment. It is a measure of scholastic aptitute. There are many factors that are not closely related to intelligence that the I.Q. does not

The I.Q. has a reliability of about 85 per cent which approaches to about 95 per cent if the average of three tests, taken at intervals of a year or two, is used. It is considerably more reliable than teachers' marks as a measure of school performance, except possibly the marks on departmental examinations. It can be raised by special coaching or drugs temporarily but not to any extent permanently.

The I.Q. is the most useful score. mark or measure, we have for any pupil. It is used in placing new pupils from outside the system, in grading in doubtful cases and is absolutely essential vocational or educational guidance as also in the case of a pupil who appears to be working below capacity.

And lastly, it must be borne in mind that it requires training, experience and above all brains to use intelligence tests satisfactorily.—Charles B. Willis, M.A., D. Paed. 1163 Oscar.

Well, Mr. Bennett?

Since Premier Bennett has seen fit to intercede in the present labor dispute by inviting the parties to sit down and bargain in an amicable manner, perhaps he is now prepared to practise what he preaches and grant bargaining rights to his own employees.

By the way, what ever happened to the Carruthers Report? Mr. Bennett seems to have forgotten to release it. Since the taxpayers of the province paid for it, perhaps they would be interested in its contents. I know that all members of our B.C. Employees Union certainly are !- "Civil Servant."

Genetic Engineering Can't Solve All Problems

logical evolution are repre-sented in the DNA of every cell of every living organism. In every sperm and egg, one 300-billionth of a gram stores an encyclopedia of genetic information, the blueprints that guide the development of the fertilized egg into a fish, a sequoia, a raccoon, a chimpanzee or a human

The DNA of a human cell is net a man, any more than a written constitution is a living democracy or than the archi-tectural plans for a dwelling are a happy home. An ideal plan can be wrecked by clumsy implementation or by unpredictable accidents.

Many imperfections in engineering designs may give no trouble; an oversized auto piston may still work most of the time. Yet when we have a catastrophic failure, like the explosion of the oxygen tank of Apollo 13, we may discover that the fault was weakness of design. view depends, how ever, on what we expect the engineer to allow for and how much we will invest to cover every contingency. Many run-of - the - mill breakdowns in automobiles could be called design failures; they are also faults in a market mechanism that makes it difficult for a mer to buy reliability from the auto dealer.

'Everything Else That Matters'

Blueprints are, then, important, but it would be a mistake to enshrine them as "all-important," if by that we meant that nothing else mat-tered. Much has been said about the prospect that new scientific knowledge will open the door to revision of our blueprints, an idea that needs much analysis.

In my own view, the most important thrust of new research will concern everything else that matters. In the run, the DNA informa-will then have a less compelling role in our personal destiny. As already happens, civilization will provide an ever-widening range of correctives to release human nature from the bonds of our biological origins This impact of culture, the progressive component of his-tory, is, after all, what distinguishes man from every other living species.

The most glaring fault in the human design is surely war, or rather our failure as a species to institutionalize a global framework for peace. Some popular writers have invoked man's instincts for aggression as the root cause of war, but we know of too many communities that have evolved a harmony of life to justify that fatalism,

The Solutions Are Political

Of course, biological human nature includes some of the requisites of war, and military conflict has been too disregarded as a factor in evolution. Nevertheless. I must call this a political problem because the possible solutions evolution of adamant instincts in either of two directions that would make war impossible: utter submissiveness in a caste system, or aggressive self-assertion in an anarchical one. But even if we knew how ment such changes in human nature, I would prefer learning how to live together as the route to survival.

Besides the general aspects of human nature, our evolutionary heritage also leaves us liable to a heavy burden of accumulated mishaps and errors in the genetic information. We each carry a load of about four serious faults in our DNA. We are saved from covering most of these faults with a normal gene from one of our two parents.

Defect Shuffled Into Egg, Sperm

When obvious genetic disease does appear, it will often be the result of a defect having been shuffled into the sperm and the egg simul-taneously. This also means that genetic disease is almost always transmitted by parents who are not them-selves afflicted by it. For this reason, it is almost totally to try to block the spread of genetic diseases to future generations by steriliz-ing those who are affected in this one.

factor in disorders like diabetes, atherosclerosis and schizophrenia, we estimate that at least 25 per cent, and perhaps half, of our total health care burden has a constitution. genetic basis.

I will summarize the main technical approaches that we can foresee over the next decade to help ameliorate these problems. The most forthright attack on genetic disease has been developed in the last few years, the technique of prenatal diagnosis.

When an early fetus is confirmed to be stricken with genetic mishap of serious, irremediable disease, it can be aborted. From the standpoint of a mother facing the dreadful prospect of bearing a malformed baby, this is a much more positive step than it may appear to a detached onlooker. She can have an abortion and try again to have the healthy baby which she has some odds of produc-

This procedure is now available for only a few diseases, but the principle could be developed for many more. I am not suggesting that aboution is that abortion is an ideal solution, but I believe that even those with strong religious convictions will temper their condemnation in the face of the human realities of this particular problem. Also, research on prenatal diag-nosis can lead to new forms of prenatal therapy which may allow more satisfactory choices than abortion.

The most important advances are likely to con-cern the unfolding of the blueprints rather than direct changes in them. We have vague ideas of how only genetic defects contribute to diseases like diabetes or Huntington's Chorea.

Identify Parents Who Are Carriers

We need more profound blochemical studies of every stage of development of such individuals before they actu-ally come down with the disease itself, for by then there may be many second-ary consequences to obscure primary point of weaks and breakdown. It may also be necessary to develop preventive therapy for such diseases starting at a very early age.

Similar studies will also make it easier to identify carriers of genetic disease, to help them know whether they have more than the average risk of certain defects in the family they are planning.

Further in the future are genetic vaccines. These would be viruses especially developed to carry correct genetic information to the body cells disease is, nevertheless, much of patients with certain specific defects. This process is very similar to the present use of vaccines for the prevention of polio or smallpox. Here, already, we use specially developed viruses to modify production of immunity.

This approach would make the most effective use of recent discoveries in molecular biolgy, like the chemical synthesis of a small gene by Prof, Gobind Khorana of the University of Wisconsin

Virogenic therapy is not intended to modify the DNA of germ cells but to add additional DNA to some body cells adversely affected by the natural endowment. The effects should not, therefore, be passed on to future generations, any more than those of a polio of smallpox inoculation.

However, we badly need more research in this general area to understand more precisely the role of natural virus infections in causing genetic changes, about which we do have some alarming

These kinds of laboratory studies, finally, are indispens able for scrutinizing our vironment for new chemicals that will aggravate our burden of genetic deterioration Many common chemicals will react with and alter DNA, but we have too little information to make precise estimates of their effects.

Radiation exposure is an inevitable side-effect of our atomic energy programs, as well as of medical X-rays and of our natural enviro of our natural environment.

The Atomic Energy Commission's standards of permissible exposure (about 30 times larger than the level we experience now from atomic energy activities) would in-crease the natural rate of mutation about 10 per cent. Over a period of generations, health cost of additional mutations would be about $10 billion a year. This estimate, and its probable uncertainty by a factor of 10 either way, needs to be immediately, into the cost-effectiveness of the genetic research needed to plan on a

THE SINGLE CANADA LEAGUE

This organization was incorporated by Letters Patent, dated August 27th, 1969, under Part II of the Canada Corporations Act for the following

(a) To assist in building a Single Canada in which all Canadians, regardless of differences in ethnic origin, whether British or French, or neither British nor French, stand on the basis of absolute equality with one another in the enjoyment of their rights and the fulfilment of their duties, without any preferential treatment to members of any component of the Canadian nation.

(b) To unite Canadians in maintaining Section 133 of the British North America Act as an essential condition of Confederation.

To promote acceptance of the opinion that, except as provided by Section 133 of the British North America Act and subject to the right of all Canadians to their own speech and way of life, English should be the only official language of Canada.

(d) To unite Canadians in opposition to any attempt to change the basic character of Canada or to establish a dual Canadian nation or create a dual Canadian nationality.

(e) To unite Canadians in opposition to the use of public funds for the preferential promotion of any particular culture

To assist in eliminating from the Public Service of Canada any discrimination or preferential treatment.

Caution Urged on Atomic Power are not immune from the hucksterism that seems to afflict so many bureaucrats -the urge to promote their specialty. Just as airport authorities think more and bigger airports are man's most urgent need, and the road people consider highways more satisfying than cities, so those who administer atomic-energy programs have been powerful advocates for the wider use of atomic energy in society.

In the United States and Britain, especially, atomic power has been promoted as a conserver of scarce fuel resources and an economic boon. In Britain, plans call for nuclear plants to produce nearly a third of the country's electricity by 1985. In the United States, the Atomic Energy Commission has been a Babbitt booster of nuclear power, brushing aside con-cerns about health and safety in its zeal.

Only now have we begun to appreciate how valid the expressed concerns are. Fission as a source of power for ships or for the production of electricity carries risks that rank high among all the

and our surroundings.

A new British magazine new British ma called most informative and unhysterical publication — gives a graphic picture of the problem in its first issue. It starts by explaining the extreme explaining sensitivity of all living beings to radioactivity, and showing how radioactive versions of such elements as zinc and iodine and strontium incredibly concentrated by nature.

* * * A River, for example, indicates how radioactivity multiplies alarmingly as it progresses up the food chain. In the water itself there were low concentrations of radioactive substances. The amount in the river plankton was 2,000 times greater, in ducks feed-ing in the plankton 40,000 times, in young birds fed by their parents on insects from the river 500,000 times and in the egg yolks of water birds one million times.

The handling of atomic waste products is already a serious problem. They have to be buried far underground or held in tanks as corrosive liquids that will boil for more than 100 years. The Ecologist notes that, of 183 atomic waste storage tanks in the states of Washington, South Carolina and Idaho, nine have failed so far.

"These failures have occurred after less than 20 years," the magazine says, "and yet the contents of the tanks are utterly lethal for thousands of years.'

At the very minimum, without any doomsday visions, all this advises caution in the use of nuclear power. For while the evidence of damage has grown, scientists have progressively lowered their estimates of the amount of radiation to which humans can safely be exposed. It appears that there is no absolutely safe dose: the risk is proportional to the "What is an acceptable risk?" Dr. Lowenstein asked. "It seems to me that there is critical difference between a risk which one chooses in order to get a larger benefit such as having an x-ray, and (the risk of having) every living thing poisoned with radioactive wastes because some decision makers, in countries, have decided that their people must have atomic power regardless of the consequences. SLIGHT STRIDENCY

The piece was just right for allowing the soloists to get the feel of the hall's acoustics. The first movement displayed well gauged belance, but the violinist's repeated double stopped chords tended to cover up essential keyboard figurations in the adagio. The Sonata ended with style and dash, though a slight stridency was detectable in the violinist's interval passages.

Interpretation of the crisp dotted rhythms in the outer movements. Even allowing for argument over correct baroque performance, playing them almost as triplets is not justified—the essential rhythmic thrust is emasculated. In the final appearance of the Passacaille tune the dotted figure was played as written. Why not throughout?

Causes of Crime

UNITED NATIONS (AP) -A new United Nations report says that despite long investi-gation, the experts still do not know what causes crime.

"Despite the years of extensive and intensive study and research in many countries, the vital factors causing crime still escape unequivo-cal, positive identification," says a paper prepared by the UN Secretariat.

"For nearly every factor known to be associated with delinquency, from 'broken homes' and mental deficiency to overcrowding, delinquent subcultures, child neglect and poverty, it is still possible to how at least as many young people subjected to such conditions who do not commit crime as those who do."

The paper is titled Social Defence Policies in Relation to Development Planning. It lists as "the main aspects of development which have be potentially crime-

inducing: Urbanization, industrialization, population growth, migration from farm to city nange. Urbanization, it explains means more "uncontrolled children on the streets of a town" and "implies more opportunities for crime with less risk of detection and a disturbing juxtaposition of affluence and poverty. . . ."

POPULATION A FACTOR

"Excessive population growth leads to crime by adding weight to the burden on the wage earner, over-crowding small houses, out-growing school facilities.

"However . . . most of these influences have provoked endeavor and greatness as well as delinquency It depends or the person.

There have been lots of other changes for the Liver-pool lad who made millions as pop star and now owns aree houses worth more than $500,000. For his birthday his wife got him a remote country cottage.

Ringo says he doesn't know how much money he has. He no longer talks about material things. What he does like is entertaining. Dictator Loved Power DOCK PLAN But Not Its Trappings

. . . dies at 81

Salazar, 81, former dictator of Portugal, died today, the office of the secretary of information

Salazar died 22 months after suffering a disabling brain stroke that left him an invalid and caused his replacement by Marcello Caetano as premier.

Until the stroke in September, 1968, ended his authoritarian rule of this country of 10,000,000, Salazar was Europe's longestsurviving head of government. He had been premier since 1932 but had held effective control of the country since the military revolution of 1926 when he was appointed minister of finance.

The former premier died at his home in Lisbon.

Among those at his bedside were Dona Maria de Jesus Caetano Freire, his housekeeper for the last 20 years.

The bachelor premier suffered a stroke in September, 1968, which left him partially para-lysed and forced his retirement.

A bashful dictator, Salazar loved power but shunned its trappings. Ruler of the world!

Efforts to stir his people to Maria. Salazar's technique was paternal, sometimes even benevolent. But he controlled police and press and permitted token opposition for only 40 days before elections every four years.

With a reputation for financial wizardry, Salazar kept Portu-gal's budget balanced when other European countries were deep in debt. But he did so at the expense of the workers, who are among the lowest paid, worst fed and most illiterate in

ILLITERACY OVERCOME

Yet Portugal's voters showed political unconcern and made no serious move to replace him. In 1966 Salazar said the public revenue had increased 12-fold to $600,000,000, illiteracy in the school population had dropped to almost zero from 70 per cent and that production was up.

If the people of Portugal seemed satisfied, it was not so with the blacks of Angola. Mozambique and Guinea. Coping with counting struggles for independence ate deeply into the carefully nurtured Portuguese treasury.

The country was forced to maintain an army of more than 100,000 men overseas. About 40 per cent of the national budgets of recent years had been spent on defence

There has been a boom in tourism. with an important influx of foreign exchange. But the trade balance showed a deficit of more than $371,000,000 in 1967. Foreign investments in Portugal have dropped sharply. Industrialists say many sectors of the economy are in trouble as a result.

Compared with living standin the more-advanced industrial countries, that of the average Portuguese is low. He gets about 48 pounds of meat a year. A recent report said the gross national product per capita is less than $700 a year.

BLOODY UPRISINGS

Reports of bloody uprisings and military reprisals in the strife-torn African territories brought denunciation from the United Nations and sharp criticism from the United States, an ally of Portugal in the Northntic Treaty Organization.

Salazar denounced the upris ings, which culminated in a full-scale Angolan rebellion in March 1961, as an insidious move inspired and financed by foreign powers. He insisted he was not opposed to Angolan independence, only to independ-ence granted too hastily, Salazar was born April 23, Salazar was born April 23, 1889, of peasant stock in Santa Comba Dao. At his mother's behest, he entered the seminary to study for the priesthood but soon changed his mind and took up economics.

He was a professor of economics at the University of Coimbra until 1928, when Gen. Antonio Oscar de Fragoso Carmona, the survivor of a 1926 military coup, called him to the ministry of finance to straighten out Portugal's finances.

Four years later Salazar became premier and in 1933 ushered in the new constitution which set the legal basis for his dictatorship.

Castro Says Cuba Facing More Worries

CARACAS. Venezuela (Reuters) — Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba warned Cubans Sunday night that more hardships and hard work are waiting for them and painted a picture of an inefficient economy heading toward serious deterioration.

Admitting that leaders of the revolution had proved "an expensive lot" during the first 10 of his administration, Castro said the Cuban people could look for another leader if they feel it is necessary.

The Cuban premier said in a speech monitored by Radio Havana, and received here that lack labor resources and many other problems will ag-gravate the economic situation in the next five years.

The speech, which lasted 3½ hours, turned out to be the most penetrating, self-criticism ever spelled out by Castro. It came as Cuba celebrated the 17th anniversary of the Cuban revolu-tion and the biggest sugar harvest in Cuban history

* Then she added ". . . and firmly believe that if a woman does not keep track of her years, she will not know how old she is, and will reckon her age by her mentality." Why should an older woman assume that it is her duty to be dowdy we wondered as we waited for another red light. Dowdiness of either mind of body is most depressing. No sensible person wants to see older women aping their young counterparts, but there is no reason on the other hand, why the woman of 60-plus should regard herself as a sort of relic.

We began to count up the number of things a woman of 60-plus does today.

She walks, jogs, bicycles, joins senior citizen centres and plays bridge and golf. She motors all over the place and at a moment's notice takes off for Europe or even more remote places in the world. She keeps up with current events, goes to the best plays, sees art and other cultural exhibits. Older women who do all these things are usually chic, well-groomed, gay and talkative. Mentally they are much more alive than some of the young around them. They remain in the heart of things as best they can. They star in their own immediate circles. Friends gather around

And, like the woman who crossed the street in front of my car, they usually have bright eyes, controlled figures, they dress neatly, and, within the limits of their budgets, with an eye for style.

* * * Just before I let her out at a downtown intersection, I suggest to my pick-up friend that perhaps all this shows a sub-conscious desire for youth and a longing to cling to it.

Suppose that is so, she countered, "the desire shows there is still deep within, a vital force, and that force is sure proof of natural being. She grinned at me as she stepped out of the car and finished with "old age has gone out of fashion . . . why don't you put that in your column?"

Let me whisper while she's out of earshot, that she herself is well into senior citizen years, but I'll wager

THE FARM LIFE

Tree of Idleness -But Not for Me

By Jack Scott

Memo to: Elizabeth Forbes Subject: The Farm Life

Mind you, dear Bess, I'm not blaming you. But that beautiful article on the joys of visiting the Comox farm of Bill and Rose McKenzie did have a The afternoon on the cool, do with it. shaded porch. The view from the high knoll to the meadow of golden hay. The wonderful supper of new beets, carrots, potatoes and peas fresh from the kitchen garden. Well, it just set me up for the kill, you might say.

The kind of weekend that resulted could happen to almost anyone now as you know, Bess. The Victoria real estate people tell me there's a whole great time to bone up on the nine thousand Chinese methods for saying Our friends, the Burwashes, Gordon and Louise, had hardly signed their steadily improving on the chances of being invited to spend a weekend in the country and that it would be a Mother Nature will put you back on your feet again. With that, Bess, he clasped my upper arm in a gesture that I took to be spontaneous comradeship, but now know was just a calculated, expert appraisal of my bicep.

All through the drive out there I was contentedly looking forward to some concentrated sloth, planning the maximum effort of placing a straw between my teeth. Then we turned into the driveway of the farm. A shadow, no larger than a ploughman's hand, fell across my expectations, There, right at the head of the driveway, were six loads of heavy gravel. It needed but a cursory glance down the road, fully half a mile in length, to deduce that this gravel was destined for a series of yawning pot holes.

As I stifled an intuitive panic, Gordon pulled up in the yard outside the farmhouse and directed my attention to a magnificent maple standing beside a small, babbling brook Under it was placed an ancient buggy seat. "We call it The Tree of Idleness," Gordon said. "Just sit there and every care will fall away."

"Yes," said Louise, "and it will be just perfect when we take down that barbed wire fence."

The silence was enormous, Bess. I knew that she was looking at me. She has a very direct gaze, like a cobra. I looked at the barbed wire fence. I've seen lacier barbedwire fences around Nazi death camps. I heard my voice, like some ventriloquist's voice. It was saying, "Can I do it? "Yes," they both said.

We went into the farm house. As I admired the magnificent old wood-burning stove, quizzically noting in passing that there did not appear to be any wood, Gordon busied himself getting me what he called, with an ingratiating chuckle, "your farmer's outfit."

A mere glance at the boots sufficed to establish that they were ideal for shovelling gravel. The great leather gloves were all but marked, "For handling barbed wire."

While my fevered brain groped to invent some sort of war wound that permit a fast evacuation to the buggy-seat war wound that permit a rast evacuation to the bugg-seat under the Tree of Idleness, I heard Louise saying, "Jack will want to see the outhouse—it's so quaint."

My ready protest was over-ridden by Gordon.
"A good weekend to dig that out," he reflected, "before the well runs dry."

Well, Bess, there's a splendid, unobstructed view of the Tree of Idleness today from the outhouse which is ready.

Tree of Idleness today from the outhouse, which is ready for the autumn drought. The barbed wire is down. The pot-holes are all filled in. There is enough wood to keep the old stove going until Michaelmas. We are invited again to spend the Labor Day weekend and I have now progressed through to the 673rd of the nine thousand Chinese ways

Psychiatrist Harbors 90 Tons of Antiquity

By DON VIPOND

Not far from the Red Lion Inn there's a long skinny building, without a single window and with a padlock on the door. Snug inside, 90 tons of antiquity waits.

The antique is Number 4012, a steam locomotive, huge, cold and black at the moment. But not dead, It is owned by Dr. Pierre d'Estrube, a Victoria psychiatrist who feels an affection for it perhaps undorstord by for it perhaps understood by only a handful of people. They are sometimes called rail-

To have an inkling of how they feel maybe you have to be at least 30 and remember that long lonely wail climbing out of the night, the thunder rolling over the station plattorm, the hiss and pant fleecy steam venting from the great black beasts.

Number 4012 was built in 1942 by the American Loco-motive Co. of Schenectady, N.Y., for the U.S. Army She saw service in the Pacific theatre where she hauled hospital trains. Eventually she found her way to Pacific Coast Terminals (C. Little Coast Terminals Co. Ltd. in New Westminster where, for at least 12 years, she labored as a yard engine.

On April Fools' Day five years ago d'Estrube bought 4012 and an identical twin. The twin is totally restored, now chuffing her way around Calgary's Heritage Park each summer, hauling a constantly replenished throng of admirers.

Every part of her authentic. That was a part of the deal, an important part, between the park authority and d'Estrube. Both engines really represent the state of the art 60 years ago. are little different than the de sign dating from 1910.

In the cab a throttle like the branch of a tree, levers for brakes and a row of taps painted red. Out front is that huge black boiler to hide where you're going. Great setting to go a little power-mad

The doctor sees the engine as a special antique for man's museum because it doesn't need to be just another dust collecter. It can be brought to life, just as it lived it 60 years and more ago.

"We've got all sorts of skeletons in our museums. But imagine seeing one come alive. Now that would be really something." So d'Estrube intends guarding 4012 until the time comes when enough people are interested in helping revive her. That won't be cheap because, to meet the standards for use of CNR and CPR track, she will have to submit to a nut-by-bolt overhaul which will cost $30,000 or more.

There's a chance a fairy godmother, in the form of a Hollywood film studio, may handle that chore. Mirisch Studios is planning a film called "The Yards at Essen-dorf," possibly to be shot at Field on the mainland and

If and when script problems get cleared away, the studio may lease the engine and handle the overhaul.

Victoria Clears Houses Away ... With the Trees

The City of Victoria already has purchased 22 of 24 houses in the way of the proposed Johnson - Begbie - Shellbourne road-widening and extension project.

But Richard K. Morris, 1562 Vining, organizer of a citi-zens' drive to alter the plans and save the trees along Begbie Street, said today he does not believe this means the trees cannot be saved.

Officials in the city's lands department said all 22 homeowners settled on purchase with the city without going through expropriation procedures. In addition to the houses, the city has initiated purchasing procedures for 35 40 bits and pieces of land along the route

RESOLUTION PASSED

Total land costs in the $1.24 million project come to $715,-000. Approval of the project with passage of the budget referendum came capital

Morris said it is obvious the scheme must proceed, but he is trying to get the city to agree to a compromise which will save the Begbie Street

At a meeting Saturday at his house attended by area residents, representatives of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control and Community Planning Association of Canada, residents unanimously passed a month halt to capital budget road work and an emergency session of Victoria council to

Morris says the compromise scheme would see Begbie become a two-lane one-way toward the Hillside Shopping

NO PARKING

The second part of the plan would turn Fernwood Road into a two-lane one-way artery feeding into the city from Hillside.

The proposal also calls for no parking along either Fernwood or Begbie, the construc-tion of sidewalks on Begbie between Belmont and Gladstone Streets and provision of special parking turnoffs in cases where residents do not have driveways.

"It's not a perfect plan, but it takes more consideration of residential areas than does the city's proposal," Morris said.

"This is a fair compromise and I don't think it means a loss of face on their part." Morris has distributed copies of the resolution to all city aldermen, and today he went to city hall to give a copy to Mayor Courtney Had-

Morris says it is important to halt construction for one month because road work on Begbie will begin in August, He wants a council discussion of the matter to inform the public on all implications of the capital budget road proj-

Residents who have to sell parcels of land along the route Thursday received registered letters notifying them the city plans to begin work on Begbie within

In some cases, said Morris, this is the first time residents knew they had to sell portions of their land.

HEARD OBJECTIONS

City traffic engineer Dave Campbell and three aldermen also attended Saturday's meeting. Campbell explained the project and heard objections to it.

Morris says those at the meeting were not satisfied against their compromise suggestions

He said he believes Fernwood should become a one-way street beause it, too, is included in city road projects over the next five years.

Keeping Fernwood to its present two-lane width better than spending the money required to expand the street, he said. The city has been numchasing properties along the John-son-Begbie-Shelbourne route for a year, though most pur-chases have occurred in the last three months.

Morris also said 140 property owners in the area have al-ready signed a petition protesting the loss of trees on and 40 to 50 more petitions are circulating in the

available

Vancouver Island Coach Lines is losing more than $100,000 a year on three Saanich Peninsula bus routes, a spokesman said today.

The company has applied to the Public Utilities Commission to discontinue service to Sidney-Deep Cove, West Saanich and Cordova Bay effective Sept. 15.

Marketing manager Jack Thomas said business has not been good for many years on the peninsula routes but the basic problem is inflation — the rising costs of everything, particularly labor.

The Cordova Bay Service, for example, generates only $420 a month in revenue, he said. "Management feels there is little opportunity to expand the area in the form of the bus travel," he said. "There is a slow increase in population (in new subdivisions) but there are two cars in most garages." company did not believe higher fares were the answer because the losses are so great and because higher fares tend to reduce usage. He said ending the service will mean layoffs for VICL staff but he did not know at this time how many employees will be affected. Persons wishing to protest the company's move "on the grounds they will be seriously affected" may do so in writing to the superintendent of motor carriers. Public Utilities Commission, in Vancouver not later than Aug. 17. A company notice said the written protests should indicate how frequently the service is used, whether the service is considered mainly as a standby for only occasional use and what alternative means of transportation are available should service be discontinued.

North Saanich Mayor J. B. Cumming said there are many older people in the municipality and they rely "a great on bus transportation. "What justification they have for discontinuing I don't Both Curtis and Cumming indicated the subject will come before their councils.

Dear Eunice Farmer.

I have enjoyed your fabric conversion chart and used it to save money many times. I did hit a snag, however, when purchased some Trevira knit that was 68 inches wide. Since this width wasn't on the chart, I figured that I would only need half as much fabric as it would take to make the dress if the fabric were 36 inches wide. It was a costly mistake because I had to buy an extra length of fabric and had lots to waste. Are there times when the conversion chart won't work?—Mrs. B. K.

Dear Mrs. B. K.:

Yes, like anything else, it will work 90 per cent of the time, but the extra 10 per cent of the time you will have to reason it out first. In your case, no matter how wide the fabric was, you must always have one length. Probably, your length with the hem

Artist Uses Light Bulbs And Egg Shells

By ROMOLA METZNER

When British artist Verna Hitchcock was in the United States for her first one-man show there, she was a little surprised at all the fuss being made about women's libera-

It has never occurred to it has never occurred to this 30-year-old blonde bomb-shell that she couldn't do whattever she pleased, whether it be in her art, her living style or her fashions.

"I live in pants," said Miss Hitchcock in her crisp manner. "I design them myself to get the right fit, as I'm in action during my working day, Only for late day do I put on a dress, and even then, it's always backless, because I like that kind simply paint my legs when they have to look dressed," With the slacks go a sleeveless poor boy sweater (worn sans bra), big-lensed Jackie Kennedy Onassis-type glasses for outdoors. Bright red lipstick accents Verna Hitchcock's generous mouth. She doesn't believe in pretending that something's smaller than it is. However, she didn't know that Joan Crawford had done the same thing back in the Thirties, thereby starting a fad for full-lipped mouths.

"Well, why not? Who says well, why not? who that there should be standard of beauty fashion, or art, for matter?"

Estrucan Style

Certainly. Verna Hitchcock works by that standard. In addition to the usual media of oils and pastels, she uses such materials as the eggshells of wild birds and familiar barnyard fowls, and fragmented light bulbs. Collage tapestries are another forte.

The eggshells are broken up into fine pieces and used to create mosaics. The subject may be one of Miss Hitchcock's own inspiration, as in her Japanese Statuettes, or it may be the portrait of a real persons, such as Barbara Streisand interpreted in the Etruscan manner.

"I saw a photograph of an Etruscan head and it occurred to me that it would look beautiful as an eggshell mosaic. Miss Streisand made an ideal subject. I always have plenty of eggshells stored away, sorted by colors."

Japanese Statuettes, which is a stylized rendition of three kimono-ed ladies, took a week to execute. The delicate green of pheasants' eggs is interspersed through the beige, brown and taupe of hen and jackdaw eggs for a subtle shaded effect.

Although classified as a British artist, Verna Hitchcock has lived only three years in London, where she arrived via Holland and her native Johannesburg, South Africa. Home is a four-bedroom flat in Hampstead, where she sleeps in the dining room, entertains in a huge lounge and uses the bedrooms for studios. All the eggshell work, for instance, is done in one room to keep the clutter isolated.

Complete Loner

Although she has been married, Verna Hitchcock says, "I'm a complete loner. I really live for my work, and when I've got something going I can't stop for anything else. The conventional demands of marriage just didn't work out for me."

She has been painting since early childhood, and has long been recognized for her oils and pastels in her native South Africa, on the Continent and in England. Art, she remarked with a faint air of wonder that anyone thould think otherwise, has no sex.

"But I enjoy the so-called feminine pursuits that have a creative side. I make most of my own clothes, and I cook Everything one does in life should be a work of art."

An inventive cook, she's known in London art circles for her curried chicken with broiled bananas and her steak with mushroom and cognac sauce. Any dish she invents she tags "a la Hitchcock." It's like signing a painting.

Chiang Ching, shown with husband Mao Tse-tung, has re turned to the cultural limelight in China with several works which reflect the Maoist movement called "revolutionary realism." The most recent composition is a piano concerto, The Yellow River, described by the Chinese press as "the first piano concerto to portray such a great theme as people's war." spelled out in Yenan 28 years ago. Chinese propagandists have launched a campaign to celebrate the annivers convenient means of linking Mao and Chiang Ching

ART IS WEAPON As Mao sees it, art and culture are political weapons.

"Politics," says Red Flag,
"is always in command of art. Artistic outlook is a reflection of the world outlook in the realm of art."

The hero of Red Lantern, Li Yu-ho, scorns death. He sings: "I look up and see the red flag of revolution; the spreading, and once the storm is past, fresh flowers will bloom; new China will shine like the morning sun."

It is no accident that Japanese militarists are the villains of both the concerto and the opera. Peking today sees the Japanese military machine as being revived at the urging of the United States.

The emphasis on war and revolution springs also from the threat of Soviet Russia on the Chinese borders, the spread of the Vietnam war to Cambodia, the world atmosphere of rebellion Mao extolled in a recent statement.

In China the cultural leader can have enormous stature. Thus Chiang Ching again occupies a position of power, as she did during the cultural

Buddhist Monks' Threats End Ceylonese Birth Control Program

BOMBAY, India (CP) -The family planning movement has come under attack by religious groups in several Asian countries.

Led by orthodox monks, these groups are trying to press governments into scrapping birth-control programs.

They argue that birth control is not sanctioned by any religion and that the use of contraceptives amounts to "planned murder."

The campaign has reached its peak in the island state of Walter Phillip Zeller, born in Waterloo County, Ontario in October, 1890, began his retail career with the F. W. Woolworth Company in Chatham, Ontario as a stockroom boy.

By 1928, having gained further experience with S. S. Kresge Co. and Metropolitan Stores Ltd., he launched his own group of Ontario stores in London, St. Catherines, Ft. William and Guelph.

It was not long before his reputation, as a highly successful retailer, was noticed by the large U.S. retail chain, Schulte-United Ltd.

His Ontario stores were purchased by the American company, not because they wanted them, but primarily to obtain the services of Mr. Zeller as the company's Assistant General Manager in New York.

The Depression Years of 1929-30 brought bankruptcy to the Schulte-United chain and in 1931, Walter P. Zeller formed the Company that purchased their 12 Canadian stores - thus launching Zeller's Limited, now a highly successful retail chain of 123 stores, coast-to-coast.

Between 1931 and 1956, Mr. Zeller lead the Company as President, General Manager and later Chairman of the Board. Looking forward to his retirement years, he prepared the way for the future of the Company and in 1952, an affiliation with the W.T. Grant Company, a large U.S. retail chain, was arranged. Grant's obtained 51% of Zeller's common shares, but Zeller's continued to operate as a separate Company with its own Board of Directors and Management. Mr. Zeller remained Chairman of the Board until his death

The growth and aggressiveness of Zeller's as a young Company, is shown by its recent venture into Auto Centres, Drug Stores, Beauty Salons in Suburban Department Stores and often combining Food Service Outlets under the same roof.

The Company employs over 6,000 persons and close to 10,000 during the Christmas selling period. Employee benefit plans include Pension, Group Life and Health Insurance, Sick Benefit, Profit Sharing Bonus and paid Summer and Winter Vacations, depending on length of service. Employees also benefit from purchase discounts in any of Zeller's stores across Canada.

Zeller's Limited has continued to grow and maintain a highly competitive outlook in the highly competitive retail field. The Management of the Company foresees unlimited opportunity for future development of new retail outlets to meet the expanding needs of the Canadian consumers.

The present Executive of Zeller's Limited consists of 11 Directors and 9 Officers. Mr. Peter Kilburn serves as Chairman of the Board of Directors. The remaining officers are J. G. Kendrick, President; J. G. Balfour, Sr. Vice-President, Merchandise; R.W. Marvell, Sr. Vice-President, Store Expansion; W. H. Buggs, Vice-President, Store Operations; T. H. Burdon, Vice-President, Personnel; A. V. Rowland, Vice-President, Finance and Treasurer; E. G. Collard, Q.C., Secretary and General Counsel; and C. C. Ross, Comptroller. The Executive Offices of Zeller's Limited are located in Montreal, Que.

ZELLER'S NEWEST STORE, OPENING WEDNESDAY, JULY 29th WILL OFFER VICTORIA SHOPPERS AN ALL-INCLUS-IVE ONE-STOP SHOPPING CENTER FOR FAMILY NEEDS AND FOR THE HOME.

The Grand Opening of Zeller's newest and first store in Victoria, will take place on Wednesday, July 29th. This will add another Zeller store to the long list already serving the Canadian shopping public from coast-

Designed as a self-service store for family fashions, soft goods and furnishing for the home. It will have a total selling area of over 67,100 sq. ft. and a parking lot to accommodate over 1700 cars. The modern, colourful decor and fixtures will incorporate the latest merchandising techniques, creating an inviting cheerful atmosphere for customers, who will shop in air conditioned comfort.

Customers will be offered an all-inclusive merchandise assortment, highlighting fashions for the family, with a smart "Salon Rendez-Yous" fashion area for the ladies. The male shopper will also find a choice of smart year-round fashions, including suits and sportswear.

Other important departments to be found in the new Zeller's include Home Improvement; Camera, Home Furnishings, Home Entertainment Center, and a Wig Boutique for the latest styles in the "look again" look. An 81 seat Skillet Restaurant will provide full course meals or snacks for Zeller customers.

> STORE HOURS Mon. - Tues. - Wed. - Sat. 9:30 A.M. - 5:30 P.M.

Thursday and Friday 9:30 A.M. - 9 P.M.

ZELLER'S STORE MANAGER

Mr. J.B. Blacklock, manager of Zeller's new store in Victoria, brings with him many years of experience in the retail field. Mr. Blacklock first joined Zeller's in 1956. Since then he has successfully managed Zeller stores in Scarborough and Cohourg, Ontario.

His past outstanding record with the Company has earned him his present promotion and he looks forward to meeting and welcoming the many new costomers who will make a habit of shopping at Zeller's.

MR. J.B. BLACKLOCK

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Recently, I read something that pleases me much, and that is that the children who are going to be admitted to the Stanford University Hospital, Palo Alto, Calif., are first being introduced to the place. Each Sunday, groups of youngsters are conducted through the children's department of the hospital; their parents

The children see the hospital beds, the buzzers that summon the nurses, and the children become intrigued to find that many children are romping around the playroom enjoying games and playing in a big doll house. On the tour a pediatric nurse explains that a child may bring his favorite toy or book and his own pajamas, slippers and robe. The child is impressed with the fact that he will not be left alone: his mother and father will be fact that he will not be left alone; his mother and ramer will obtained allowed to come and see him at any time, because the visiting hours in the pediatric ward are unlimited. This statement can reassure the parents as much as it does the children.

Today, in some hospitals the mother is welcome to go into the hospital and stay overnight with her child, to share his room and take care of him. This is by far the best arrangement for the child's sense of security. Also, the mother can be a great help to the nurses, who are generally terribly overworked and have little time to do the many routine chores that the mother can easily and willingly do. In the old days, in 1905-1907, when I worked in a big city hospital, it was terrible what was done to a child, taking him suddenly away from his parents and leaving him crying perhaps all day and all night. As a result, sometimes the child became hostile to his parents, feeling as he did that they had cruelly deserted him. Sometimes weeks passed before the child got over his shock. Terrible also was the way a child would be sent up alone to the operating room, there to suffer the shock of the old-fashioned anesthesia, which was ether administered by placing a cone over the face-sometimes a frightening experience even for an adult. It was a wonder that more children did not die of

This is why I am happy when I read of hospitals like the one at Stanford, where the child is treated with kindness and Lower suite has 1000 sq. ft. with 2 Br., large living room, pleasant kitchen. This property is 2 years old and 8 immaculate. It is an excellent investment with attractive terms and full price of $35,000. CAREFULLY!

It is easier to buy and live in a duplex rather than a single house. Why? Because although you are buying two houses, they are sook. Live in one, reat the other. It is better for the young family to purchase a new duplex, as we can acquire a larger ist mortgage, hence a much lower down payment. Why not start your married life as the mandaord inseed of the tenant available in prime renting area. For facts call

HOME GARDEN

Proper Time for Harvesting

By HILDA BEASTALL

A first-year vegetable gardener is likely to wonder when the different kinds of produce are ready to be used. He, or she for that matter, can scarcely be blamed for this lack of knowledge if until now carrots and beets have appeared only in well scrubbed bunches at the supermarket, and peas and beans came either in cans or frozen packages. The real thing as grown in the home garden is a different proposition. So that this list can be kept for quick reference we shall give the most commonly grown vegetables alphabetically. Beans, the dwarf bush kinds both green and yellow, ready to use from four inches long, before bulged out with the seeds

Cabbages, as soon as a firm head has formed. Different varieties will be different sizes at maturity, but the smaller heads are sweetest.

Carrots, any time the tops of the roots are as big as a dime. Move the soil carefully with fingers to check, replacing it so that carrot rust-fly eggs are not deposited in the crown.

Cucumbers are best when slender and about eight inches long, before beginning to turn yellow.

Marrows are liked by some when six to eight inches long, by others when a foot in length.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

Onions for green salads can be pulled at any time. Keeping onions must have been grown with bulbs exposed to sun and should begin to dry the outer covering and ripen the tops before being lifted.

Peas should have pods well filled, but still be fresh green, not a whitish green. Potatoes will have foliage beginning to turn brown as a sign of tuber maturity. Early varieties can be lifted at once, later crop should be left until tops completely wither. The potatoes will then reach maximum size and maturity for keeping.

Spinach; the early spring spinach is used by pulling up the whole plant when about six inches high. Later kinds, like whole plant when about six inches high. Later kinds, like Longstanding Bloomsdale, have only the medium or large leaves taken, since the small ones continue growing and producing more pickings as time goes.

New Zealand spinach will continue bearing new shoots if these are continually out off for use.

Swiss Chard has thick crumpled leaves with broad white midribs. Cut the medium size ones for use; the plants will go through the winter with plenty of leaves to cook, and begin seeding in June, when the plants are discarded. Use white turnips when the size of hens' eggs, and the orange ones as they reach baseball size, for best flavor.

Do leave tomatoes to ripen fully on the vines. Unless you do this you might as well buy imports. The sunripened juicy tomato, warm from the vine, is a memory worth taking tomato, warm from through the winter.

only hope of fulfilling the contract was to trick the opponents into making a mistake. So, at trick two, he entered dummy via the heart king, and laid down the jack of trumps. If east had the doubleton K-x of trumps, and covered the jack with the king, West would be forced to win the trick with his singleton ace.

But, on the lead of the spade jack, East played low, and West's king won the trick In time South incurred a one-trick set.

Had South been an expert, he would have perceived that there was a legitimate chance to fulfill the contract. This could be accomplished if East had started with exactly the Q-x-x of hearts.

Playing on this assumption, at trick two South would lead a low heart to the board's king. Next would come the 10 of hearts which South would overtake with his jack. The ace of hearts would then be cashed, a diamond being discarded from dummy as East's queen fell. South's high nine of hearts would next be laid down, dummy's remaining diamond being discarded.

As is evident, East would ruff this trick with the trump six. When South next regained the lead, a trump play would fell West's singleton king and East's now-singleton ace. From here in, South's only loser would be a club to West's ace. So, in post-

WASHINGTON (Reuters) United States troops have crossed the border into Laos and fought North Vietnamese troops on Laotian soil several times for periods of up to eight or nine hours, it was disclosed tolay.

U.S. Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird made the disclosure May 4 in testimony before the House of Representatives subcommittee on defence appropriation, just four days after American troops crossed into Cambodia. His testimony was released today.

Laird said he did not believe the incursion into Laos violated the congressional regulation against using U.S. fighting forces on Laotian soil.

The secretary said he was in South Vietnam at the time and personally authorized one of the incursions.

Laird told the subcommittee when the safety of American troops is involved in battle, I presently feel that, as secretary of defence. I have the authority to permit our commanders to make short incursions into Laos in accordance with our protective reaction policy to prevent American casualties."

Asked about criticism that the U.S. forces had failed in their aim of capturing the Communists' headquarters in Cambodia, Laird sail the forces never intended to capture the headquarters intact, but only to destroy their facilities and put them out

OTTAWA - Queen Elizabeth toured the Arctic with her family despite the cold and black flies for a variety of reasons. But possibly the most important was the federal government's determination to make the sovereign presence of the Crown felt "north of 60," as the officials here describe their domain.

That demonstration was aimed not only at foreigners, but also at ambitious provincial premiers trying to annex federal land as well as territorial politicians who want to take it over from Ottawa as new

Outlook Changing Towards Tundra

Unlike the rest of this continent, the rest of the western hemisphere or its so-called founding nations, Canada is a northern land and slowly this inescapable fact is tilting the whole nation's outlook towards the tundra.

The elements always have known this fact. The odds are an overwhelming three-to-one that any raindrop falling on Canadian soil eventually will drain down-not up-to the Arctic Ocean or Hudson Bay. Yet most Canadians still think that "downhill" points

They're talking gun law but, on the whole, Ottawa is the major target of Victoria and other Island fishermen in the latest incident of a Russian fishing trawler sideswiping a Port Alberni troller of the west coast.

In groups of two, three or more, fishermen at the Inner Harbor today were bitter in blaming Ottawa for lack of protection on the fishing grounds and even for allowing the huge Russian fishing fleet to operate in an area which has traditionally been the bread basket of Canadian and U.S. trolling fleets.

"They haven't got the guts to do anything. Someone is getting paid off. How the hell can we go on the bank . . . we risk our lives every minute

Tree of Idleness -But Not for Me

By Jack Scott -

Memo to: Elizabeth Forbes Subject: The Farm Life

Mind you, dear Bess, I'm not blaming you. But that beautiful article on the joys of visiting the Comox farm of Bill and Rose McKenzie did have a lot to do with it. The afternoon on the cool, shaded porch. The view from the high knoll to the meadow of golden hay. The wonderful supper of new beets, carrots, potatoes and peas fresh from the kitchen garden. Well, it just set me up for the kill, you might say.

The kind of weekend that resulted could happen to almost anyone now as you know, Bess. The Victoria real estate people tell me there's a whole

Our friends, the Burwashes, Gordon and Louise, had hardly signed their mortgage before it happened to us.

"You've been looking rather peaked," Gordon said, oozing com-passion. "A weekend of country air, just lolling on our porch drinking in the beauties of Old Mother Nature will put you back on your feet again." With that, Bess, he clasped my upper arm in a gesture that I took to be spontaneous comradeship, but now know was just a calculated, expert appraisal of my bicep.

All through the drive out there I was contentedly looking forward to some concentrated sloth, planning the maximum effort of placing a straw between my teeth. Then we turned into the driveway of the farm. A shadow, no larger than a ploughman's hand, fell across my expectations.

There, right at the head of the driveway, were six loads of heavy gravel. It needed but a cursory glance down the road, fully half a mile in length, to deduce that this gravel was destined for a series of yawning pot holes.

As I stifled an intuitive panic, Gordon pulled up in the As I suffed an infutive panic, Gordon puted up in the yard outside the farmhouse and directed my attention to a magnificent maple standing beside a small, babbling brook. Under it was placed an ancient buggy seat. "We call it The Tree of Idleness," Gordon said. "Just sit there and every care will fall away."

"Yes," said Louise, "and it will be just perfect when we take down that barbed wire fence."

The silence was enormous, Bess. I knew that she was Ine stience was enormous, bess. I knew that she was looking at me. She has a very direct gaze, like a cobra. I looked at the barbed wire fence. I've seen lacier barbedwire fences around Nazi death camps. I heard my voice, like some ventriloquist's voice. It was saying, "Can I do it?" "Yes," they both said.

We went into the farm house. As I admired the magnificent old wood-burning stove, quizzically noting in passing that there did not appear to be any wood, Gordon busied himself getting me what he called, with an ingratiating chuckle, "your farmer's outfit."

A mere glance at the boots sufficed to establish that they were ideal for shovelling gravel. The great leather gloves were all but marked, "For handling barbed wire."

While my fevered brain groped to invent some sort of war wound that permit a fast evacuation to the buggy-seat under The Tree of Idleness, I heard Louise saying, "Jack will want to see the outhouse—it's so quaint."

My ready protest was over-ridden by Gordon.

"A good weekend to dig that out," he reflected, efore the well runs dry."

Well, Bess, there's a splendid, unobstructed view of the Tree of Idleness today from the outhouse, which is ready for the autumn drought. The barbed wire is down. The pot-holes are all filled in. There is enough wood to keep the old stove going until Michaelmas. We are invited again to spend the Labor Day weekend and I have now progressed through to the 673rd of the nine thousand Chinese ways of saying No.

Psychiatrist Harbors 90 Tons of Antiquity

By DON VIPOND

Not far from the Red Lion Inn there's a long skinny building, without a single window and with a padlock on door. Snug inside, 90 tons of antiquity waits. The antique is Number 4012.

a steam locomotive, huge, cold and black at the moment. But not dead. It is owned by Dr. Pierre d'Estrube, a Victoria psychia-trist who feels an affection for it perhaps understood by only a handful of people. They sometimes called railroaders.

To have an inkling of how they feel maybe you have to be at least 30 and remember that long lonely wail climbing out of the night, the thunder rolling over the station platthe hiss and pant of fleecy steam venting from the great black beasts.

Number 4012 was built in 1942 by the American Loco-motive Co. of Schenectady, N.Y., for the U.S. Army, She saw service in the Pacific theatre where she hauled hospital trains. Eventually she found her way to Pacific Coast Terminals Co. Ltd. in New Westminster where for at least 12 years she labored as a yard engine.

On April Fools' Day five years ago d'Estrube bought 4012 and an identical twin. The twin is totally restored, now chuffing her way around Calgary's Heritage Park each summer, hauling a constantly replenished throng of admirers.

Every part of her is authentic. That was a part of the deal, an important part, and d'Estrube. Both engines really represent the state of the art 60 years ago. They are little different than the design dating from 1910.

In the cab a throttle like the branch of a tree, levers for brakes and a row of taps painted red. Out front is that huge black boiler to hide where you're going. Great setting to go a little powermad.

The doctor sees the engine as a special antique for man's museum because it doesn't need to be just another dust collecter. It can be brought to life, just as it lived it 60 years and more ago.

"We've got all sorts of skeletons in our museums. But imagine seeing one come alive. Now that would be really something."

So d'Estrube intends guarding 4012 until the time comes when enough people are interested in helping revive her. That won't be cheap because, to meet the standards for use of CNR and CPR track she by - bolt overhaul which will cost $30,000 ore more.

Victoria Clears Houses Away... With the Trees

The City of Victoria already has purchased 22 of 24 houses in the way of the proposed Johnson - Begbie - Shellbourne road-widening and extension

But Richard K. Morris, 1562 Vining, organizer of a citi-zens' drive to alter the plans the trees along Begbie Street, said today he does not believe this means the trees cannot be saved.

Officials in the city's lands department said all 22 home-owners settled on purchase prices with the city without going through expropriation procedures. In addition to the houses, the city has initiated purchasing procedures for 35 40 bits and pieces of land along the route

Total land costs in the $1.24 million project come to $715,-000. Approval of the project came with passage of the capital budget referendum

Morris said it is obvious the scheme must proceed, but he is trying to get the city to agree to a compromise which will save the Begbie Street

At a meeting Saturday at his house attended by area residents, representatives of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control and the Community Planning Association of Canada, residents unanimously passed a resolution calling for a oneroad work and an emergency session of Victoria council to consider a compromise.

Morris says the compromise scheme would see Begbie become a two-lane one-way street leading out of the city toward the Hillside Shopping Centre.

The second part of the plan would turn Fernwood Road into a two-lane one-way artery feeding into the city from Hillside.

The proposal also calls for no parking along either Fern-wood or Begbie, the construction of sidewalks on Begbie between Belmont and Gladstone Streets and provision of special parking turnoffs in cases where residents do not have driveways.

"It's not a perfect plan, but it takes more consideration of residential areas than does the city's proposal," Morris

"This is a fair compromise and I don't think it means a loss of face on their part."

Morris has distributed copies of the resolution to all city aldermen, and today hewent to city hall to give a copy to Mayor Courtney Haddock's office.

ALL IMPLICATIONS

Morris says it is important to halt construction for one month because road work on Begbie will begin in August. He wants a council discussion public on all implications of

Residents who have to sell parcels of land along the route Thursday received registered letters notifying them the city plans to begin on Begbie within month.

In some cases, said Morris this is the first time residents knew they had to sell portions of their land.

HEARD OBJECTIONS

City traffic engineer Dave Campbell and three aldermen also attended Saturday's meeting. Campbell explained the project and heard objections to it.

Morris says those at the meeting were not satisfied against their compromise suggestions.

He said he believes Fernwood should become a one-way street beause it, too, is included in city road projects over the next five years.

Keeping Fernwood to its-present two-lane width is better than spending the money required to expand the street, he said.

The city has been purchasing properties along the Johnn-Begbie-Shelbourne route for a year, though most purchases have occurred in the last three months.

He also said property owners in the area have already signed a petition pro-testing the loss of trees on Begbie, and 40 to 50 more petitions are circulating in the
